HOME FABRIC

Crypton Home fabrics are cozy, carefree and loaded with style. No wonder they are the industry standard-setter. Soft velvets, elegant linens, chunky wovens, recycled cotton and more, all designed with permanent protection from spills, stains and odors.

Gina Hicks, through a class offered by the chamber of commerce. “We started out thinking it would be a few hours of design work; then we saw the project and realized it was so much more,” says Mensch. “We were so excited by it, we decided to volunteer our time to see it through. It’s an amazing opportunity to honor the history of the house and the people who stayed there.”

Though details from the original property remained intact, no photos of the interiors had survived. Instead, Mensch and Hicks took stylistic inspiration from the era and updated it with a contemporary feel. The four guest rooms pay tribute to the luminaries who once stayed there, from a vivid pink interior celebrating the queens of soul to a “Legends” room that pays homage to star athletes like Robinson. The designers relied on their regular resources to make the project come together on budget. A connection to the High Point x Design network of vendors helped them tap into a broader community, many of whom embraced the mission behind the project; Thibaut, Splashworks, Faizy and Regina Andrew, among others, all contributed. For Pass-Miller, seeing the house up and running again after so many years is a long-held dream come true, and the first step toward reuniting Magnolia House with its community. Hicks agrees: “You can’t help but feel, Is this the house coming back to life?”

High Point x Design will host a party and a tour of The Magnolia House (442 Gorrell St., Greensboro) on Friday, April 1, at 5:30 p.m.

Movers and Shakers

This spring, a crop of brands will be displaying at Market in brand-new showrooms—many for the first time. The debuts include artisans like Debra Steidel, who brings her ceramic sculptures and vessels to Suites at Market Square (M5024); as well as larger brands like Accent Decor, which is opening a 5,500-square-foot location of design-driven accessories in IHFC (H309). Some new showrooms bring local talent to market, like North Carolina upholstery maker Newton Coley (Market Square Tower, 101A), while others showcase creations from abroad, like Danish brand Natures Collection’s line of fur accent pieces (IHFC, IH311).

Plenty of brands are also on the move or expanding. Fabric giant Kravet has relocated to the first floor of 200 Steele, where it will debut the brand’s first outdoor lifestyle collection. York Wallcoverings is making the move to InterHall (IHFC, IH203); nearby, Dowel Furniture makes its market return (IHFC, IH210) after a pandemic hiatus. Meanwhile, expansions abound: Belle Meade Signature relocates to 117 N. Hamilton (and grows from 1,000 to 6,000 square feet), while bedroom manufacturer Fabelli Italia is moving to a bigger showroom in IHFC (H504).

Market Report

Here’s the news to know before heading to the show.

BY FRED NICOLAUS

A Living Museum

Throughout much of the 20th century, travel could be dangerous for Black Americans. That was especially true in the South, where Jim Crow segregation laws allowed hotels, bars and restaurants to turn away nonwhite customers—to say nothing of the harassment and violence that lurked in unfriendly locales. From that fraught landscape emerged the Green Books, a series of guides compiled by writer Victor H. Green that identified establishments friendly to Black travelers.

The Magnolia House in Greensboro, North Carolina, was just such an establishment. Founded in 1949 as a bed-and-breakfast, it was a welcoming haven for Black travelers making their way through the state. Magnolia House catered to everyday people, but it hosted a dazzling array of Black celebrities too—Jackie Robinson, Ray Charles, James Baldwin, Miles Davis, James Brown, Gladys Knight, Tina Turner and Sam Cooke all laid their heads in Greensboro.

The bed-and-breakfast eventually closed and the house fell into disrepair. In 1995, Greensboro resident Sam Pass purchased the property to save it from demolition, kicking off a decades-long journey to restore Magnolia House to its former glory—a project that was finally completed late last year by Pass’s daughter, Natalie Pass-Miller. “My father was one of the local kids who would be running up the street to see the fancy cars and who was going to be staying at Magnolia House, so he was very aware of what it meant to the community,” says Pass-Miller, who took over the restoration in 2018. Within a few months, the movie Green Book came out. “A week later someone sent me an email with a Green Book page with Magnolia in it,” she recalls. “I had to sit down and digest what this really meant.”

Pass-Miller’s goal is to revitalize the property as a “living museum”—a memorial to the historical importance of the house, and a functioning bed-and-breakfast and event space. To execute the design, she contacted local firm Vivid Interiors after meeting its principals, Laura Mensch and

ON THE COVER

She She’s collection for Tempaper features four peel-and-stick wallpaper prints across six colorways. Inspired by the architecture and scenery of the Dutch Caribbean, the patterns—including the bold botanical Flamingo Salinas, shown at left and on the cover—pay homage to the island of Curaçao, and more specifically, its sunbaked palette and lush tropical landscape. The result is a whimsical assortment of energetic peel-and-stick designs meant to evoke a sense of escapism, and that can be applied (and removed) with ease. See the entire line in the Tempaper space in InterHall (IHFC, IH305).

Design Out Loud

A new collection from TOV Furniture taps six powerhouse Black designers.

BY CAROLINE BOURQUE

Several years ago, Durham, North Carolina–based designer Don Ricardo Massenberg walked into TOV Furniture’s High Point showroom and expressed an interest in creating his own line of chairs. The encounter led to plans for a collaboration, which quickly grew into something much bigger. Massenberg suggested five more designers to contribute to the line, leading to a collection that was ultimately named The Voice.

The lineup of designers—Carneon Hamilton, Nile Johnson, Erika Hollinshead Ward, Nicole White and Justin Q. Williams—all worked alongside the TOV team to create a collection of more than 20 items, ranging from chairs and chests to beds, tables and credenzas. Pieces from The Voice are both adaptable for a variety of uses and acutely personal to each designer, with multiple items named for children, spouses, grandparents and other loved ones.

The line fulfills TOV’s long-held goal of addressing the lack of visibility for the Black design community. Founder Chaya Krinsky says the company was intentional about handing the reins over to the designers to steer the collection’s creative path. “It was important for us that they be the catalyst for their message,” says Krinsky. “Our voices are always stronger as a group rather than as individuals. Each of these designers is so different in their craft and has such a different background, so it was only natural to include multiple perspectives in the collection.”

Designer Don Ricardo Massenberg pulled notes from several iconic eras, drawing upon shapely art deco curves and nodding to the simplicity of mod 1950s style to create the eponymous Ricardo chair, along with the Ayanna chair (below) and Durwin bed, which are named for his niece and nephew. The plush, rounded pieces all fulfill his goal to create “furniture that feels like a hug.” Beyond the appeal of the designs, Massenberg hopes the collection will be trendsetting in other ways, too. “Focusing on the perspectives of different types of people is a benefit to any brand,” he says. “I hope this will create a huge splash so others will jump on the bandwagon.”

Erika Hollinshead Ward deployed her signature “traditional with a twist” aesthetic to the Ava bed (above) and Brooke dresser—pieces named for two of her daughters. For the bed, the Atlanta-based designer drew from her client experiences to solve a common dilemma she has encountered: women requesting a four-poster bed, only to receive pushback from partners who find the piece too feminine. Ward’s solution is a sturdier rendition of the piece, complete with a headboard made from a weighty mix of acacia, iron and faux-suede upholstery. “I wanted to design something that would suit both aesthetics,” says Ward. “I believe your home should be flexible and adapt to your needs.”

Atlanta designer Justin Q. Williams looked to the important people in his life for cues on how to craft namesake pieces in the Voice collection—the Van chair (left), named for his father, is understated and stylish, while the Crystal chair gets its name from his mother and features an eye-catching pattern that reflects her charisma. For the Jessie sectional, a nod to his grandfather, Williams sought to evoke “the quintessential gentleman,” an impulse that dovetails with his interest in creating a more elegant modular sofa. Williams says exhibiting the pieces alongside close friends like Ward and former Design Star: Next Gen co-contestant Hamilton only serves as an added honor. “To me, the Voice collection is just that—it is giving designers of color a voice in an industry that typically doesn’t reflect us,” he says.

For her first furniture design venture, Nicole White started with a key source of creative inspiration in her own life: her closet. The Sunrise, Florida–based designer started the process by pulling out a variety of jewelry and clothing, creating a tray that would guide the fashion-inspired pieces she contributed to the collection. White’s designs feature vibrant orange and yellow textiles, metallic jewelry-like motifs and leopard print (a neutral, she insists). They also pay homage to her own lineage—the Enid chair and Mavis bench get their names from her grandmothers in Jamaica, while the Ajani ottoman (right) nods to her son, Xavier Ajani. That familial feeling, also extends to her fellow Voice Collection collaborators. White originally met Ward and Hamilton when all three were struggling bloggers. “I am proud that we’ve all grown our businesses from the ground to this level,” she says. “It’s like a homecoming.”

Philadelphia designer Nile Johnson crafted the Abreeyah sofa (left), Jobriyah bed and Makai desk as love letters to each of his three children. The neutral-toned pieces each evoke the promise of stability at home, a nod toward his children’s journeys through the foster-care system. For Johnson, joining his peers in the spotlight for his debut product designs enhances the celebratory moment of reaching a long-awaited career milestone. “I’m one of those people who, if I get a candy bar or if I go to a great hotel—whatever I have that’s good in life—I always want to share it,” he says. “It’s one of the reasons I’m a designer, because not only do I love beautiful experiences, I love sharing beautiful experiences. To be able to share this experience with [my fellow designers] probably means more than the actual tangible goods coming out of it.”

Carneon Hamilton crafted pieces that act as a time capsule, with each design nodding to a major event that influenced her career. The Adu chest features a texture that mimics that of the art installation-meets-headboard wall she created as part of the One Room Challenge. The base of the Etta coffee table and side table, meanwhile, reflects a handpainted mural that went viral on social media, and the arched, raised panels of the Simone credenza (above) recall the very first piece of furniture the Memphis, Tennessee-based designer built as a winning contestant on HGTV’s Design Star: Next Gen. Hamilton has dedicated the collection to her late husband, Marcus Hamilton, who helped her name each piece after the women whose voices the pair enjoyed listening to together—Sade Adu, Etta James and Nina Simone. “We’re not typically a people who have space and opportunity to be heard,” she says. “To have this loud expression of who we are not only as people but as designers—and to have these tangible items speak for us—‘voice’ is just an encapsulating word for so many different things that are happening with this collection.”

Double Take

Keep an eye out for these first-time collaborators making their debuts this season.

Wildwood x Cheryl Lockett

Created in partnership with Wildwood, interior designer Cheryl Lockett's debut collection of furniture, lighting and accessories pulls from her Southern and African-American roots—showcasing a classic, formal aesthetic with an added bend toward rich textural elements like Kuba cloth, lace and pen shell. Lockett traces her focus on textiles and upholstery back to a childhood spent surrounded by women who sewed and left pattern books around for the budding designer to flip through. “Anytime I’m designing, especially a product, it’s important for it to be a reflection of who I am or where I create from,” says Lockett. “That’s also how I tend to create for my clients—in the same way that I dig into who they are when I’m putting together a space for them, I use that process to create products.”

RoomMates x Nikki Chu

Artist and interior designer Nikki Chu combined geometric forms and monochromatic details to create her first wallpaper collection in collaboration with RoomMates, York Wallcovering's peel- and-stick division. In line with Chu's “modern globalism” aesthetic, the designer used her experience visiting places like Africa, Bali, India, East Asia and the Caribbean to influence her creations.

Alden Parkes x Jacob Lukas

“Palladio meets Palm Beach” was the guiding principle for the Worth Avenue Collection—a furnishings line from Kurt Miller and Lukas Mack of Jacob Lukas Design for Alden Parkes. Made in Italy, the pieces nod to their place of origin with clean lines, muted gold accents, rich finishes and custom hardware, while also showcasing classic Greco-Roman architectural elements like fluted details and column-like structures. “Collectively, we agreed that every piece must not only be sculpture in itself but have storage capabilities and a functional purpose,” says Miller.

Chelsea House x Kristi Nelson

Interior designer Kristi Nelson has joined forces with Chelsea House for her debut collection of travel-inspired furniture, lighting, accessories and mirrors. The assortment is organized into four globally inspired design themes: contemporary neoclassical, art deco, grotto and nature's inspiration. Sketching out the collection, the designer let her imagination run wild through memories of her travels through the U.K., France and Italy, along with her former home in Los Angeles and her new home in the Blue Ridge mountains of North Carolina. “In my professional life, drawing is always with intent for my client, so there are boundaries and objectives that drive it,” says Nelson. “Creating for this line was a joy because I could just let myself go, with no boundaries or predetermined outcomes. The ideas came, and I drew them as they came.”

Universal x Erinn Valencich

Los Angeles-based interior and product designer Erinn Valencich has partnered with Universal Furniture for a furnishings collection drawn from modern European, Japanese and Californian influences. The 45-piece assortment exhibits clean lines and sculptural forms in a variety of finishes and materials, including dark walnut, white lacquer, silver leaf and black chrome. Surprising details can be found in unexpected places, such as inside a leg or underneath a table top. “I really love to design pieces that I dub ‘modern classics’—something that can be used in a traditional home to give it a little bit more of a modern flair, or go into a more contemporary home to warm it up with a lot of texture and streamlined details,” says Valencich.

EtúHome x Bria Hammel

Teaming up with EtúHome, designer Bria Hammel has tapped the brand’s sustainably sourced materials and European artisans for a collection of dual-function wood, glass and ceramic kitchen accessories in a neutral palette of gray, cream and natural tones. Highlights include a semi-oval wooden serving board marked with a strip of contrasting timber, handthrown stacking bowls and a wooden pinch-pot tray designed to be placed within arm’s length of the cook. Hammel jumped into the creative process by imagining her new creations at home in a French outdoor kitchen. “Whether you’re cooking in your kitchen with the fresh air blowing through your windows or setting up an al fresco dining table, we wanted to take those light, organic details we love about the spring and summer seasons but give them that classic, French aesthetic we’re endlessly inspired by,” she says.

Nathan Anthony x Sahara Novotna

When Nathan Anthony creative director Tina Nicole went looking for a collaborator well versed in a variety of mediums to help her explore new materials for upholstery, she found the perfect partner in multimedia artist Sahara Novotna. The resulting Alais Collection combines the best of each designer’s knowledge: Nicole designed the upholstery frames, established the scale of the ball feet and selected the fabric covers, while Novotna crafted the 8-inch spheres from resin using a process she developed herself. “Today, the savvy interior designer knows they deliver value by specifying furnishings and decor items that their clients won’t discover on their own,” says Nicole. “We are creating these products for them. It’s more than furniture; we’re giving them a story to tell.”

Visual Comfort x Paloma Contreras

For Visual Comfort, interior designer Paloma Contreras lifted details from her travels in Paris for the creation of her debut lighting collection, which includes chandeliers, pendants, wall sconces, and table and floor lamps. “It was important for there to be a sense of versatility as well as impeccable attention to the details,” says Contreras. “The pieces in the collection are deceptively simple, with clean-lined silhouettes, but the details are truly next level.”

Hot Spots

The search for the perfect piece can be just as fun as finding the treasure. Here's your go-to guide for navigating High Point Market this spring.

BY CAROLINE BIGGS

Ask any design lover and they'll tell you the same: The hunt for the perfect piece can be just as fun as finding it. However, even the savviest High Point shopper may need a bit of help navigating the vast terrain. To make your Market endeavors go more smoothly, we've highlighted every showroom featured throughout this guide (plus other key buildings and notable debuts) so you can explore the best of what each neighborhood has to offer. Though we can't unearth your hidden treasure for you, we can make locating it a little bit easier.

HAMILTON WRENN NORTH

Inside 200 Steele, visit Kravec's new High Point home to discover the Marigold chaise from the Soleil collection. Though it's certainly sleek enough to employ indoors, this cushy lounge can be upholstered in your choice of fabric, including the brand's InsideOut line, designed with built-in outdoor performance qualities to ensure it can withstand the elements. While you're in the building, swing by Alfonso Marina on the first floor to admire the Tourmont cabinet on stand, which takes pattern inspiration from the organic motifs found in mountainous rocks and boasts delicate pointed legs with a brass crosspiece. As you make your way down Hamilton Street, stop in at Gabby to catch a glimpse of the Candace sconce—a textured wall light with a bronze arm and a milky-white alabaster orb.

NORTH ELM

On English Road, step inside SplashWorks to see artist Sarah Hamlett's Majestic series. Each of the colorfully layered works speaks to a different emotional state or natural phenomenon—such as falling in love or simply watching the sunset—and comes in an assortment of sizes as well as acoustical treatments.

MARKET SQUARE & ELM

At 220 Elm, head over to Qeeboo to see Stefano Giovannoni's delightful and—gasp!—outdoor-friendly Rabbit chair in all its adorable glory. Once you've caught your breath, make your way to the Suites at Market Square so you can bask in the sprightly hues of all the Hexagon shades at Sorella Glenn. On your way out, stop by Ngala Trading Co. to swoon over the Panoramic server, a whimsical sideboard dressed in a lush trompe l'oeil motif that evokes a tropical vista.

RUSSELL & GREEN

Crafted from anigre and oak, the Solis credenza by Theodore Alexander is adorned with sunburst-detailed doors and etched hardware. While you're in the area, do yourself a favor and make a stop at Tourmaline Home. The brand's Shine decorative pillow offers a sophisticated—and comforting—spin on fashion's metallic fabric craze.

COMMERCE CONCOURSE

In the International Home Furnishings Center, don't miss the Juniper mirror by Lily Koo—a dreamy design clad in handcarved leaves and finished in silver leaf. While at IHFC, stop by Hooker Furniture to check out the statement-making Big Sky wardrobe, inspired by the rustic beauty of the American wilderness. Before you leave, seek out the Duval chandelier from Crystorama Lighting, which features cascading strands of frosted glass beads and is available in antique gold or matte black finishes, and Dowel Furniture's clean-lined Loma console table by designer Josh Greene.

Perfectly Imperfect

The hottest debuts at High Point Market this season embrace the beauty in imperfections.

BY CAROLINE BIGGS

Though the concept of wabi-sabi has been around for centuries, its principles are being applied to contemporary designs in all sorts of imaginative ways. The Japanese philosophy, which loosely translates to “flawed beauty,” draws inspiration from the unruly organic motifs found in nature and favors imbalance over perfection. In today’s marketplace, we’re seeing the wabi-sabi aesthetic expressed in everything from asymmetrical silhouettes and amorphous shapes to cracked, kintsugi-style patterns—including these Spring Market finds that embrace imperfection without sacrificing style.

1. Composed of sand-casted iron, the base of the Monterey table by Studio A Home mimics the appearance of gnarled tree branches and boasts a handpainted finish.
2. A sliver of bronze glass gives the two-toned Torino mirror by Jay Jeffers for Arteriors a dash of asymmetric edge.
3. The graphic, earth-toned pattern in this rug from Unique Loom’s Tucson collection is meant to mimic the dried, cracked sands of the Southwest desert landscapes.
4. The randomly placed oval cutouts in Bungalow 5’s shapely Laramie vase allow for an endless array of inventive floral arrangements.
5. Don’t let the leaning frame of Kenneth Cobonpue’s Lolah capsule fool you—it offers plenty of support. Constructed of thin, handbent rattan strips, this weather-resistant stunner comes equipped with a deep, rounded seat cushion and three plush pillows that can be upholstered in an assortment of outdoor-friendly fabrics.
6. Planum Furniture’s Pebble nesting tables can be displayed in a variety of configurations to forge a one-of-a-kind coffee table display that you can easily switch up on the fly.
7. The swirling golden yellow accents in the PRS28 rug by Noursion evoke the fragmented lines and metallic details of kintsugi joinery.
8. Like jewelry for your living room, the Gemstone table by Barbara Berry for Baker Furniture is crafted from Murano glass and features an uneven faceted surface for added oomph.
9. Handblown by European artisans, the Sphere bud vase by Bria Hammel for EtúHome is designed to sit slightly askew on a smooth surface.
10. Crafted in solid wheat bamboo, the Rosemary coffee table by Greenington Fine Bamboo Furniture boasts a curvy, oval-shaped top and a clean-lined, asymmetrical base for a touch of contrast.
11. A squiggly decor piece with a small, space-savvy twist, the Rosario wall hook by Accent Decor can be used to hang out-the-door essentials in a cramped entryway.
12. The Mozambique triptych by Zoe Bios Creative features an off-center abstract motif and comes in your choice of emerald green or blue.
