Urban Forest

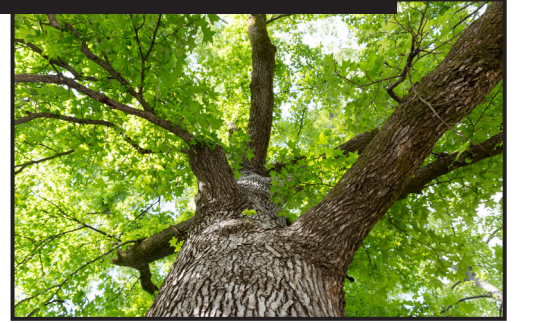

At Alabama Sawyer, we design modern, environmentally sustainable products from fallen trees in the Birmingham, Alabama area. Since we began, we have diverted hundreds of logs from the landfill by transforming them into award-winning furniture and products for homes and businesses.

In the field, we skillfully mill unique, forgotten trees that might otherwise be wasted. We obsessively craft our furniture in our studio. Transforming urban timber into long-lasting wood products has a measurable positive effect on the air we breathe. Fortunately, our customers care about beautifully designed, expertly crafted furniture and products, and they care about the environment. We hope you will see something new each time you look at the wood grain or finished edge.

Field to Studio

Urban forests give us cleaner air and cooler temperatures. A living tree provides great value to the community — so can a repurposed one.

We handle each log individually with an eye for the best cut. Then we mill it to show off its inner beauty.

Iron bases for our tables are hand-cast or fabricated by expert craftsmen in Birmingham, Alabama—a city built on steel.

Kiln-dried wood is brought to our studio where we transform the natural material into unique furniture.
