Aspen

Warm and inviting in marled earth tones, Aspen's 100% New Zealand wool construction produces a very soft hand, making it an excellent alternative to natural fibers, which can be more coarse underfoot. It features an organic, hand-composed look with braided yarn varying in gauge – some thin and tightly woven, others nubby and thicker, imbuing texture and interest. Its low, durable, compact construction makes it an excellent option for layering rugs.

Bar Harbor in Granite

Bar Harbor

Bar Harbor's durable blend is made of 80% white dyed wool interlaced with 20% jute cord, giving it a soft and organic look. It is hand-loomed with a compact construction, irregular pattern, and subdued color choices, making it a universally appealing neutral with great overall texture. Alternatively, you can choose the bolder, more graphic black-and-white aesthetic of Granite.

Newport

Drawing inspiration from Newport's vibrant harbor, this 100% New Zealand wool rug showcases bold and colorful contrasting stripes. The wool is semi-worsted, meaning that only the strongest fibers are combed and spun into yarn. The lively colorways include sunny yellows, serene blues, and warm browns.

Sarasota ☀️

This indoor/outdoor rug is made of 100% UV-stable polyester PET, which means it maintains the soft look and feel of wool while being highly durable. The fibers are made from recycled materials, such as water bottles, making it fade-resistant, versatile, and practical. Sarasota's braided construction comes in various rich colors and has a universal appeal for outdoor living spaces and high-traffic indoor areas.
