ALAE

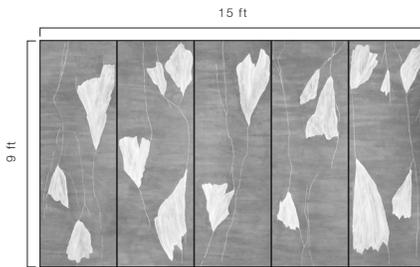

ALAE is an intimate study of flight revealed under magnification — a dramatic exploration of butterfly and dragonfly wings observed at the edge of the visible world. What appears delicate and ephemeral from a distance becomes, upon closer examination, an intricate architecture of line and luminous pattern. The result is a surface alive with tension, strength and fragility held in perfect balance.

WILDFLOWERS

WILDFLOWERS draws inspiration from the cut-out organic forms of Henri Matisse's later work. Uncomplicated yet deeply expressive, this pattern celebrates the purity of silhouette, the energy of color, and the power of simplicity. Executed at a grand scale, WILDFLOWERS transforms walls into an immersive field rather than a decorative backdrop. Each form feels distinct yet interconnected, allowing contour and hue to carry the composition.
